THE VICTORIA WOODEND, EST. 1861

MR THORBURN: Robert Hogg Thorburn was born in Edinburgh in 1827. He married Sarah Ann Baldwin in 1852, and the couple made their way to the Victorian goldfields, which were gripped by 'Gold Fever'.

Robert soon decided that Woodend would be more prosperous, as it was often choked with fortune seekers on their way to Bendigo and Castlemaine. He bought land from P. A. O'Farrell, where they lived in a tent for a time.

Eventually, he built The Victoria, a grand, two-storey hotel constructed of brick and stone. It boasted 18 rooms, including nine bedchambers and two sitting rooms.

RATTLE SNAKE JIG: WT Sampson leased the Victoria Hotel from Robert Hogg Thorburn. Sampson advertised that families from the metropolis could be accommodated in private apartments and waited upon by their own servants or the hotel's staff.

WT Sampson also provided entertainments, many of them free, to entice patrons to his hotel. One particular concert featured Mr William Robson, who was listed as the "Greatest Clog, Juba and Ballet Dancer in the Colonies." He also performed his celebrated Rattle Snake Jig.

WILD GEORGE: 'Wild George' Thorburn was the nephew of Robert Hogg Thorburn and Sarah Thorburn, and lived with them for a time in Woodend. 'Wild George' was considered the black sheep of the family and often found himself in trouble with the law.

'Wild George' was a known associate of the Kelly Gang and was said to have helped them evade jail time by assisting with the escape of stolen horses that were being held as evidence against the gang.

HAPPY NEW YEAR: New Year's Eve at The Victoria Hotel in 1921 was certainly a night to remember. The Woodend Star reported the sensational events that occurred that night: "New Year Sensation in Woodend: Edward Allison was charged on remand that he shot at George Bowen, wounding him in the arm at The Victoria Hotel, with the intent to murder!" (Woodend Star, 15 January 1921)

Two months later, Edward Allison was found guilty in court of shooting with intent to murder. It is not known what punishment Mr Allison received, but it is believed he was most likely sentenced to a term of imprisonment.

GHOST ISABELLA: During the 1920s, Isabella Ames sold her Collins Street and Collingwood hotels to purchase The Victoria Hotel, which she and her family owned for 58 years. During this time, Isabella had many different licensees operating the pub.

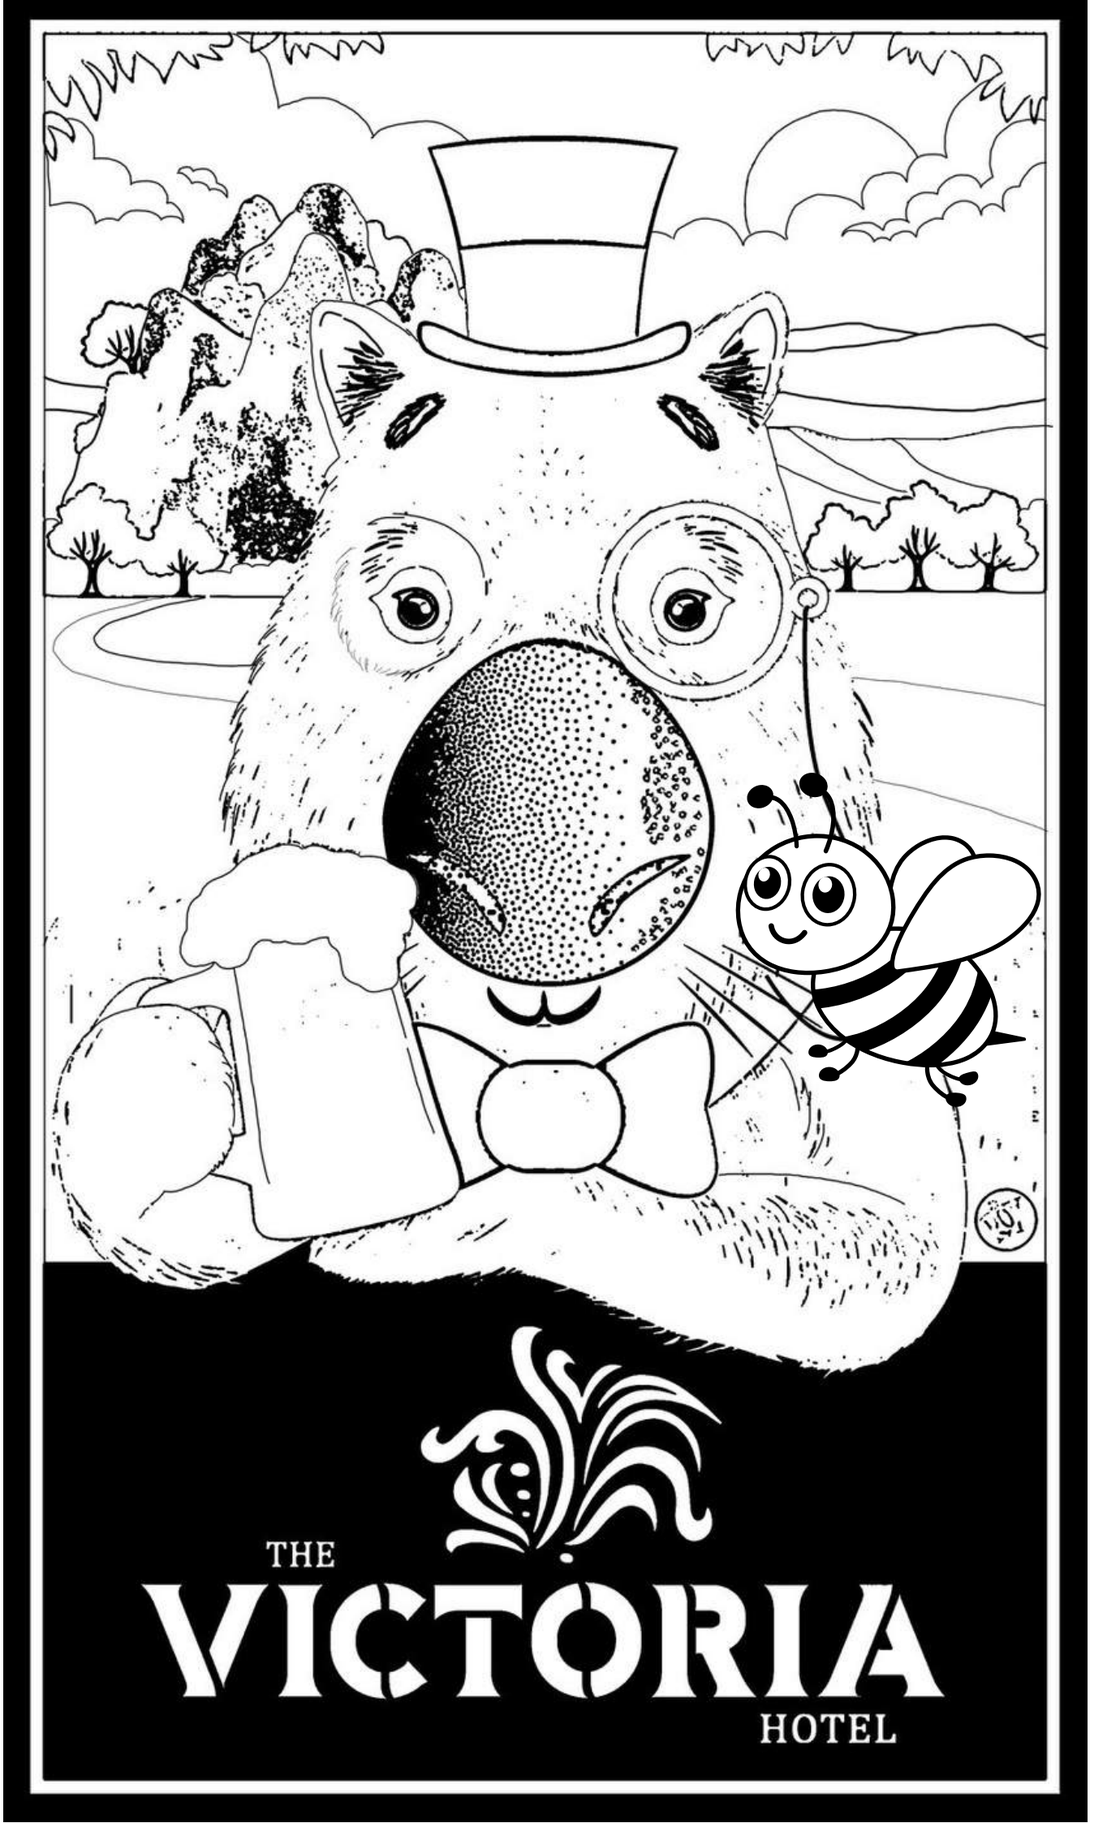

The hotel remained in the family until 1978, when Isabella's grandson, Johnny Marcroft, finally sold the hotel.

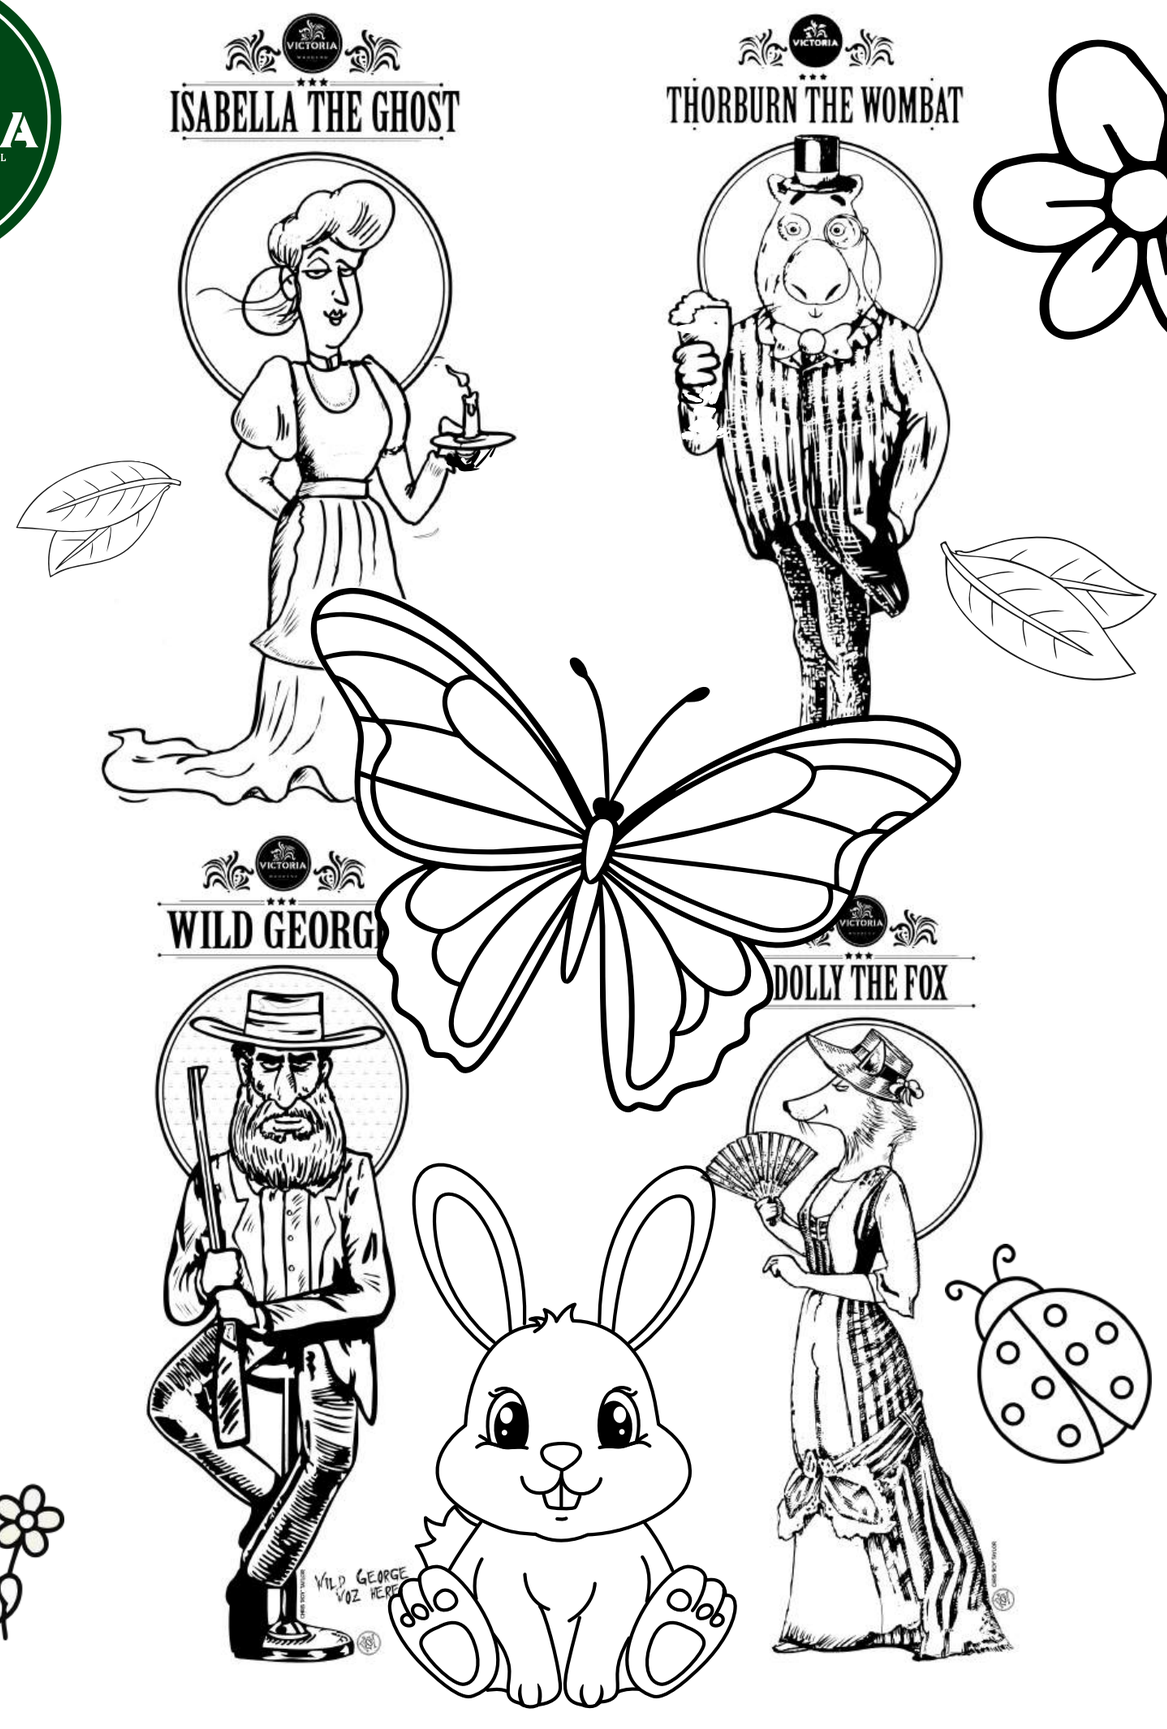

There have been numerous sightings and reports of strange goings-on, particularly in the upstairs rooms of the pub. It is believed that, to this day, Isabella is still floating around the pub, making sure that things are exactly the way she likes them.

HUGE thanks to the Woodend Historical Society especially Jannyse Williams.

Have you found Jeffery our resident catfish in the fish tank? You have to be really quiet when you look for him as he usually only comes out early morning or late at night to clean the fish tank. He is black and has spikes on his head!
